HEBREW U. ASKS UNITED NATIONS FOR ART OBJECTS NAZIS STOLE

Special JERUSALEM — The Hebrew University has initiated steps to recover for the Jewish people the cultural and art treasures of European Jewry that have been stolen by the Nazis and transferred to Germany, Dr. Leon Roth, Rector of the University recently announced. Dr. Roth revealed that the Nazis have stored up in Munich large Jewish libraries as well as considerable booty of Jewish art treasures and archives which they had plundered throughout Europe. The Hebrew University of Jerusalem is negotiating with the appropriate institutions of the United Nations in London with a view to securing these treasures after the war and transferring them to Palestine.

J. E. A. Drive to Seek $30,000 for Building

The drive for a new Hebrew school building on the North Side was supposed to have gotten under way last night. I understand that the goal was set at $30,000, which will not be particularly difficult to raise, but the way the J. E. A. is going about it, with no publicity, and no educational propaganda, seems to me to be a mistake.

TIME RELEASE TO HIT HATERS

Special NEW YORK—Scheduled for early release, a special March of Time film stressing the need for inter-racial and inter-faith unity will be shown nationally. The film contains striking sequences depicting the activities of un-American agitators who foment racial discord, and the results of their vicious work.

EXHIBITION, "JEWISH PALESTINE AT WAR," DRAWS THOUSANDS

Special LONDON—An exhibition depicting "Jewish Palestine at War" was recently opened in seething Piccadilly Circus under the auspices of the "British Association for the Jewish National Home," of which Gen. Sir Wyndham Deedes is chairman. Within sound of the roar of London's traffic, the spirit of Tel Aviv is captured by thousands of visitors, including countless American soldiers.

Describing the reaction of British and American soldiers who visited the exhibition, one correspondent writes:

"Most of them seemed dazed. This was something new, something they had not comprehended before. They paused before a cut-out model showing the places where Palestinian Jews had fought and died, from Dunkirk to Bardia, El Alamein to Tunis, Crete, Greece and elsewhere.

"One man's remark was in itself a revelation.

"He said, 'I didn't know Kisch was a Jew.'

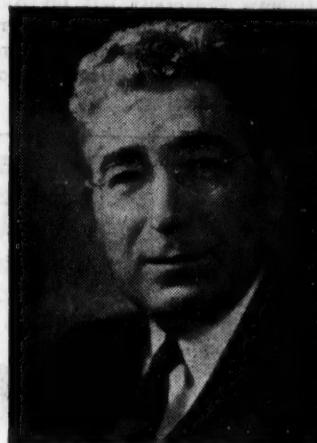

"For the first time they see something of the contribution Jewish Palestine has made to the Allies war effort. Palestinian Jewish soldiers, Palestinian Jewish airmen and sailors, Palestinian ATS and WAAFs."

Weizmann Doubts Jews Will Return

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

LONDON—Doubts that the exiled and deported Jews of Europe will be able to return to their homelands after hostilities cease, were expressed here by Dr. Chaim Weizmann. Declaring that "it is not easy for human beings to return to mass-graves," Dr. Weizmann added that Fascist ideas will prevail in occupied Europe for generations after its liberation.

Addressing a special session of the Board of Deputies of British Jews called to discuss the problem of the Jews in German-held Europe, Dr. Weizmann welcomed the recent statement by President Roosevelt on the plight of Jews in Europe, but stated that because of the overwhelming war problems facing the United Nations, it will devolve on the Jews of the democratic countries to rescue their brethren in Europe.

Special CHICAGO—A recent advertisement in the Chicago Journal of Commerce read: "House for sale. . . Adults only. . . Gentile. . . No dogs." Contacted by the Anti-Defamation League, the business manager of the newspaper has expressed his regret for the offensive ad and has given assurance that such prejudicial copy would not be accepted again.

In Houghton Lake, Mich., previously heralded as "a great Gentile community" in its advertising, all signs bearing the discriminatory phrase have been repainted, at the suggestion of the League. And through the League's Real Estate Advisory Committee, a discriminatory rental policy at the Orio Village War Housing Project of 600 homes near Chicago has been eliminated.

Lilenthal, chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, addressing more than 100 Jewish leaders at a luncheon at the Hotel Biltmore, expressed the conviction that the $150,000,000 Jordan Valley Authority project which is now being developed here by the Commission on Palestine Surveys at the recommendation of Dr. Walter Lowdermilk, U. Soldier Hospitality Pays Big Dividend—Last Sunday morning, Mrs. Roselle Newman, secretary to the JWB director at Evansville, undisturbed by her fifteen soldier guests who were U. S. O. going around her house, took out 12 yards of material to start making a new slip cover for her divan. Fussing and fuming and getting nowhere fast, Roselle was nonplused when a quiet, modest corporal, Irving Schuster, asked if he could help, and working as only an experienced tailor can, in less than an hour and a half, the corporal had measured, cut, sewed and fitted the slip cover, complete even to a pleated ruffle around the bottom, without even the aid of pins or a tape-measure. Which all goes to prove "to a soldier be kind, and save nine."

I went to a dance last Sunday sponsored by the Judean Club here—met a few Jewish girls, but not like our girls. There are quite a few Jewish people here. Many are refugees from Burma. ## SARA'S COLUMN

By SARA MESSING STERN

A WEEK'S HONEYMOON ON THE ISLE OF CAPRI! This fell to the lot of Lt. Jessie Levin, the bride, and Lt. David Bernstein, the groom! They were married the latter part of May by the army chaplain in Naples, Italy. There were bridesmaids, a maid of honor and a best man, a bridal gown and veil, a "choopah" and the leading cantor of Naples made it a lovely wedding! The bride is a daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Sam Levin, 2822 Central avenue, and a sister of Mrs. Douglas D. Brown. She is a dietitian in a station hospital in Italy. The groom is a former Indianapolis man who was living in New York City at the time of his induction. And, to cap the climax, Dr. Bennet Kraft, a brother of Philip Kraft, was present at the wedding. Major Kraft's wife and 3-year-old daughter live at the family residence here, 7025 Washington boulevard. Major Kraft has been overseas since May, 1943.

MRS. SIMON L. KISER INFORMS ME that the E. M. K. initials on the menu of the Wineman-Snewind wedding mentioned in this column on May 19 belonged to Emanuel Kahn, whom everyone called "Manny," a son of the Leon Kahns, pioneer residents of the Indianapolis Jewish community who lived on East street just north of New York street. Mrs. Kiser also adds two names to the L. L. L. group written up in the column on June 9. Mrs. Kiser said that Mrs. Sol Hays and Mrs. Simon L. Kiser were admitted to membership when one member moved away and another died.

TEN YEARS AGO, on June 10, a friend of the then Bertha Brown dressed three dolls, a bride, a groom and a maid of honor, down to the last detail. They turned out to be a beautiful set and were presented as a loving gift to be placed on the wedding cake when Mark P. Klain and Bertha Brown were married. It was the first marriage, by the way, solemnized by Rabbi David Jacobson after his graduation from the Hebrew Union College when he came as assistant to Rabbi Morris Feuerlicht. The sequel to the story of the dolls is that they were used on the tenth wedding celebration by the Klains as a table centerpiece. The Klains received informally on their anniversary, and more than fifty friends called to congratulate them. Rabbi Jacobson, who performed the ceremony is now located in San Antonio, Texas.

LT. CHARLES B. FEIBLEMAN, who recently landed in Italy—he is in the field service—was reading a letter from home when someone came up in back of him, put his hands over Lt. Feibleman's eyes and asked: "Who is it?" And the lieutenant answered: "Sonny." And it was he. "Sonny" is the nickname of his first cousin, Lt. Isadore M. Randolph, who is with the infantry. Lt. Feibleman had been told "Sonny" was "somewhere in Italy." Lt. Randolph is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Randolph of New Castle, Pa. Mrs. Philip Randolph is the former Gladys Grohs of Indianapolis, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Grohs, New York street residents of the olden days and a sister of the late Henrietta Grohs Bowman. Philip Randolph is a brother of the late Ella Randolph Feibleman, mother of Charles. Lt. Feibleman and Lt. Randolph have had an evening and later a part of a day together in which to talk about the dear ones at home.

CONGRATULATIONS to Isadore H. Katz and his parents and to the Louis Strashuns on the engagement of Isadore to the charming niece of the Strashuns, Jacqueline Winkler of Chicago. Jacqueline's mother is a sister of Mrs. Strashun and has been a frequent visitor in Indianapolis.

CONGRATULATIONS to Mrs. Samuel Alpert, who on June 9 celebrated her fiftieth birthday. She has lived in Indianapolis 29 years and she and her husband will have been married 28 years on September 3. The Alpers have a grocery at 983 West 21st street and there is a saying that has endured through the years: "No one in need comes away from the grocery or the Alpert home (at 4013 Boulevard Place) empty-handed." I never knew a warmer-hearted, more generous personality. If cakes are needed for the U. S. O. at Kirshbaum or for the Old Folks' Home, if food has to be cooked, if money is needed for a good cause, back on Mrs. Alpert. And she makes you feel you are doing her a favor by asking her. She is a member and board member of the Joseph and Anna Borinstein Home for the Aged, a member of the Eastern Star and in its cheer committee, a helpful worker for the Masonic Old Folks' Home at Franklin, Ind., a member of Hadassah, chairman of the ways and means committee for the Denver Home for Children and on the membership committee, a member of Beth El, Knesses Israel and the Central Avenue congregations. In fact, she is a woman of real service to our Jewish community.

NEW YORK DATELINE..

By RINNA GROSSMAN

NEW YORK, June 18—This afternoon at the Hotel Pennsylvania the New Zionist Organization, Zionists-Revisionists, opened its two-day session convention which was expected, only a few weeks ago, to disclose sensational developments in the history of the organization, namely, its first move in the return to the fold of the World Zionist Organization.

Here in New York informed Jewish circles spoke with assurance of various negotiations aimed at the return of the NZO. From London came a Jewish Chronicle story revealing the fact that the president and chairman of the NZO and the Jewish State Party had cabled their Palestinian memberships advising the coalition which would direct the somewhat lost and bewildered Revisionists to that place in the Zionist Organization which they left vacant in 1934.

It was logical, people said here last week, that the Jewish State Party, which has been part of the Revisionist movement before Jabotinsky marched himself and his followers out of the Zionist Organization, be the medium of unity. And it would not have come as startling news to many had this week-end resulted in the official preliminary steps towards this goal. However, it now appears that there will be no such step.

From Palestine, the rank and file of both groups protested. The Revisionists have replied that considering the long history of abuse and discrimination against them in Palestine they cannot now be expected mildly to surrender the principles for which they once walked out. Furthermore, they cannot come back unless they come back reinstated in full. They have no desire to be "forgiven," accepted with pity and tolerance.

The Jewish State Party in Palestine and London oppose any negotiations before the actual entry of the NZO into the Zionist Organization. So the news, the uniting of two oppositions, will be postponed apparently.

PLATFORM TAKEN OVER BY ZOA

Perhaps it is just as well. Time has been unkind to the Revisionists. They lost their great, inspired leader and found no one to take his place. Concurrent with this, they saw their ideas and platforms accepted and trademarked with the seal of the Zionist Organization. The ideologies which seemed "radical" and "mad" a few years ago became part of the Biltmore program. A Jewish Army. The Jewish Commonwealth. Transfer of Population. One after the other, these concepts were taken over and their originators left without credit or a chance to redeem themselves, as it were.

And the road back will not be easy. There will have to be concessions and compromise, and, above all, a leader. The splits and quarrels within the ranks of the tired and distressed New Zionist Organizations will have to be done away with. These are tasks demanding energy and incentive. And it may be to the good of all concerned that the negotiations have not come through so far.

The convention will inject a most urgently needed "vitality serum" into the pale veins of the once vivid and imaginative party. And it will furnish its members with a much needed chance for balancing of accounts and blue-printing for the future.

However, the conclave at the Hotel Pennsylvania will produce more than outlines for large scale long range action.

MAY TAKE CONFERENCE SEAT

There are several immediate points on the agenda. The American Jewish Conference and the seat it has once again offered to the New Zionist Organization. This time there is good chance that the offer will be accepted and the platform put to use.

The Hebrew Committee for National Liberation. The action of the New Zionist Organization in Palestine disavowing the works of this new group is expected to draw a belated statement from the convention dissociating the Revisionists from anything connected with the Liberation Committee.

There are other similar house cleaning chores to be done before any further steps can be taken in the direction of returning to the World Zionist Organization. Above all, a marshalling of strength and the definition of new campaigns and new drives.

Now it can be disclosed that negotiations went on between the New Zionist Organization and the leadership of the American Zionist Emergency Council aimed towards the eventual entry of the NZO into the council. Because the Zionist Organization cannot deal on a "part-time" basis with any group outside its own ranks and because the partial affiliation of the Revisionists would have brought in its wake only friction and constant trouble, the negotiations were abandoned. This will probably be another matter dealt with at the convention. The gestures now must come from the Zionists. It must be made easier for Revisionists to leave a decade of splendid though not en-

1 ROOM ONLY; MOVE BY JULY

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

STOCKHOLM—The official German news agency DNB this week reported from Budapest that an order has been issued there under which all Jews of the city will have "to live together" by June 30. Those Budapest Jews who have not yet moved from their homes into the recently established ghetto districts will have to arrange for "voluntary moving" before the end of this month. The order specifies that no Jewish family can occupy more than one room and that all houses where Jews reside must have a "clearly visible, 30-centimeters-high Star of David displayed at the front door."

Not Even in Army, But Jailed for Desertion

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

JERUSALEM—Polish military authorities here have sentenced a Polish Jew to six years imprisonment on charge of "desertion" although he was never a member of the Polish armed forces, it was disclosed when his attorney filed a writ of habeas corpus in Jerusalem district court.

The first two Palestine restaurants, one Jewish and one Arab, serving food at cost price were recently opened in Jerusalem by the Government Food Controller. The restaurants are operated on the same lines as the British Government restaurants in the United Kingdom.

Temple Beth-El's (Richmond, Va.) first bar mitzvah will take place at services tonight.

tirely successful isolation and come back. But the basic idea is alive today as it has not been for years, and even the derelict discussions with the Emergency Council prove that somewhere, somehow in the not too far future Zionist ranks will once again close, healing old wounds and uniting for the sake of new and more terrible ones.

The London-Jerusalem New York circuit of modern Zionist politics has been buzzing with the possibilities and potentialities of the rapprochement and has given New Yorkers a chance to take a "look-see" at the present position of the New Zionist Organization throughout the world.

With the war and the destruction of Jewish youth in Europe, the NZO, whose chief glory was its young and ardent "Betar," the military, nationalist youth movement it created, found its main props to be in South Africa and Palestine.

London, too, has been the scene of a Revisionist rejuvenation.

New York, where all attempts to transfer the spirit of the British Trumpeldor or "Betar" failed, gradually became the political center, a tow-line to Palestine.

As is the case with almost all Zionist groups whose headquarters are in Palestine, the American Revisionists are more moderate, more inclined to forgive and forget, more anxious to effect unity. And New York is slowly becoming the main political site for party activities and decisions. Whether, as in the case of conciliation with the World Zionist Organization, the judgment of the American camp will win out over the still extreme, still unrelenting Palestinian Revisionist party is a question of conjecture.

But the major consideration today, as the delegates meet in the corridors of the Hotel Pennsylvania, is that unity will be mentioned, and consolidation spoken of.

There will be a new terminology used at the New Zionist Organization assembly today, as it has been used in hundreds of Zionist meetings throughout the country for the past year, and the password will be unity toward strength; strength towards victory. The parlance of the convention this afternoon will still be militant, still score the wrongs of the incumbent leadership of the Zionist Organization, but the tone will be less raucous, less hostile.

Two congregations, B'nai Israel, of Canton, Miss., and B'nai Joshua, of Chicago, have joined the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, bringing the total membership of the group to 316.

CARL ALPERT, NEW PALESTINE EDITOR, JOINS POST STAFF

To the Editor:

For five years, before becoming editor of The New Palestine, I conducted a weekly column in the Anglo-Jewish press, under the title of "I Think as I Please." I propose to resume that column now, and I would prefer that it appear exclusively in your paper, the "Emporia Gazette" of Jewish journalism in this country.

About what would I write? About many things. I plan to discuss the broad field of life in America, as a Jew, a soldier, a liberal looks at it. For example,

I might have devoted an entire column to a discussion of the case of Fr. Orlemanski—you remember, he is the Springfield, Mass., priest who chatted with Stalin—and might have pointed out that his enforced seclusion now is proof conclusive that the Catholic Church can silence a priest if it wishes. This is something to be remembered if Fr. Coughlin should become rambunctious again.

I might review recent books, such as "Strange Fruit," which has provoked a censorship storm, but which struck me as a mediocre novel.

The fact that my wife served a new delicacy, gefilte fish, from a can, might provide opportunity for comment on matters gastronomic and epicurean.

At the moment I am disturbed by President Roosevelt's apparent shift to the right in matters international.

national, and wonder what will be come of all the fine plans for international post-war collaboration and cooperation. I have some interesting correspondence with my good friend, Ely Culbertson, author of the World Federation Plan, which I might share with your readers. William Ziff, author of "The Coming Battle of Germany," tells me, too, of his new book, still in manuscript, "The Gentlemen Speak of Peace." The title drips with satire.

I am reminded of my interview at the Soviet Embassy in Washington about three years ago, when my story on the granting of religious freedom in Soviet Russia was quite an important piece. I'm sure you and your readers won't mind if I reminisce occasionally. It will always be to the point. There was the time also in Washington, when I got into a squabble with Peter Bergson, now self-appointed ambassador extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary representing Peter Bergson in this country.

Of such matters would my column be made: of social and economic views, of international affairs, of memories. And if you know me, you realize that I couldn't overlook Zionism and other topics of vital interest to Jewish survival.

And I'd like to make it a two-way column, too, with your readers participating. Their letters, comments, questions would be most welcome.

Do you want the column? If so, you might publish this letter as the first contribution, and I'll follow up with weekly installments.

Sincerely,
PVT. CARL ALPERT.
Camp Blanding, Fla.

Editor's Note: Pvt. Alpert's column seems to me to be just what I have been looking for. If you see this in print, you'll know that The Post has him under a year's contract. Not only is he a profound student of Zionism, but he is the kind of a straight-talking fighter that will fit in superbly with The Post's policy.

The Editor's Chair

For years The Post has dreamed of reaching the place where it could publish a national edition. This was a goal towards which we have been working, not too directly, but practically every move we've made in the last few years has behind it the thought that perhaps some day we would be able to drop the local news from out of the paper each week, and have what we would call a national edition.

That meant not only having a great deal of national news, but in addition printing enough pages each week, so that when the local news was left out, there would still be enough pages of news to warrant people outside of Indiana paying money to read it.

Finally about six or seven weeks ago the move was launched. Out of the first 100 persons outside of Indiana whom we solicited by mail for subscriptions we got seven new subscribers. This was remarkable as well known publications like Time etc., consider two percent returns as the top expectation. Since then we've made other tests with larger numbers of prospects and although the returns have not been as good for some reason, still we are going ahead. We ran a third of a page ad in the National Jewish Monthly for this month, and results from it have been gratifying, although the cost of this kind of solicitation may prove prohibitive.

For there is very little national advertising to be gotten as far as Jewish papers are concerned, so that unless we can secure the new subscribers at a cost low enough so that the greater part of our $3 per year subscription price remains for us, then we will not be able to afford to enlarge our circulation.

So we are gradually adding correspondents throughout the country to our staff in order to be able to provide a better paper. Ernest Lenn, whose article you saw on Page One last week, is our San Francisco correspondent. In addition we've added Robert Green in Boston, and Nathan Cohen in Atlanta. We intend to cover the United States in this way.

In addition you see in this week's paper, a new column by Carl Alpert, who is known throughout the Jewish newspaper field. Mr. Alpert was editor of The New Palestine, organ of the Zionist Organization of America.

No Chance for the Conference

IT IS difficult to see how the second session of the American Jewish Conference can be expected to be successful, which in plain terminology means how can the Conference be saved from the inevitable dissolution which the trend of events seems to be dictating.

In a frank discussion headed, "Let's Face the Situation," Louis Lipsky, chairman of the newly-elected Administrative Committee, has this to say about the situation:

"... The American Jewish Conference had to operate as one among a group of organizations, all zealous and jealous of their prestige and engaged in making their record in the journal of Jewish life in their own names.

"If the Conference could not produce unity in action with the organizations committed in loyalty to its service, how much less could it exercise authority over organizations expressly dedicated to the purpose of defying the organized responsibility of the American Jewish Community, which the Conference presumably represented? These rebellious groups went about their business with more energy and zeal than ever before, intruding by design, creating an amazingly disorderly impression upon the American scene, and challenging the Conference in a way which it could not meet effectively without the invocation of authority or recourse to tribunals of arbitration which did not exist, and which, if they did exist, would not be recognized by the rebels.

"The situation was made more difficult by the fact that the general public, excited by the remarkable success of the first session, stimulated in its hopes by an active Jewish press, was under the impression that the Conference was to cure all the ills of Jewish disorganization and establish itself as an all-inclusive central body, in which not only what had been agreed to at the first session, but also many other categories of interest, on which there was a decided difference of opinion within the Conference, were to be included in the range of the responsibilities of the Conference. Many overlooked the fact that the Conference could not interfere in the defense of Jewish rights in the American field. Its scope was limited by agreement to the post-war problems of Jewish life in Europe, to the defense of our position in Palestine, and to the rescue of European Jewry. All else was actually beyond the jurisdiction of the Conference. But the public was not satisfied with this limited program. Its criticism of the Conference arose largely out of the fact that the Conference was not able to fulfill the great expectations of the public in every regard.

By the nature of its composition, the Interim Committee during the entire period, seemed to have no organ of expression, no voice in defense, no instrument of interpretation. The Interim Committee during the entire period, seemed to session. It was not equipped for effective representation of its own interests. . . ."

These things being true, what then can this second session accomplish? Will this mere reconvening alter the factors, which although as described by Mr. Lipsky pertained a year ago, operate if anything more effectively now?

The debacle was in no way lessened by Henry Monsky's fine point making at the recent Triennial of B'nai B'rith nor can it be expected that the organizations Mr. Lipsky says are too zealous of their prestige, will all of a sudden drop their love of self.

If as Mr. Lipsky points out the American Jewish Community expected too much of the Conference, as the situation is today, American Jewry expects nothing of it now. The one factor that the Conference evidently will not be able to surmount is that the American Jewish public realizes today that the Conference is a failure. The elements who never wanted the Conference in the first place, now have the force of public opinion behind them, and certainly the American Jewish Committee is not expected to yield now if it was willing to buck the forces of public opinion to drop out of the Conference in the first place.

To rebuild the Conference at this time will be a task requiring years, and certainly the body does not have the vitality nor the backing even from its own constituents to accomplish this task.

The Conference's only possible chance was to have called for new elections with perhaps the reluctant groups (excepting of course the American Jewish Committee) joining in. But this is not going to be done.

Al Segal, Rabbi Gup and the Zionists

WHAT Rabbi Samuel M. Gup, of Columbus, O., was able to initiate in his home town in the meeting between labor, industry and the clergy, is religion in practice. Instead of preaching for virtue and against vice from his pulpit and then stopping right there, Rabbi Gup put his principles into action.

This is the modern is real religion. The religion which says providing a piece of bread for a man and making it possible for him to retain his dignity is just as much God's will as attending services in cloistered halls.

And so it is with Zionism. There are those who like Al Segal concede that Palestine as a haven is proper, but wouldn't and haven't lifted a finger to make this possible. They with Mr. Segal are willing to see two million Jews sacrificed in a realistic world, while waiting for the millennium. Zionists on the other hand, prefer to do something about the situation, in much the same manner as does Rabbi Gup.

Last week Mr. Segal praised Rabbi Zavada who died leading a Russian attack on the Nazis. This week rabbis should stay in their pulpits.

Mr. Segal in his column this week is aiming at rabbis whom he calls politicians. He talks about the good life, while these rabbis do something about the good life. Therein is the difference. If the Zionists had followed Mr. Segal's advice, there wouldn't be those 300,000 Jews in Palestine today who escaped from Hitlerism. Instead there would be 2,300,000 Jews exterminated by the madman.

Raising Over 16 Million in Five Months

TOO much cannot be said about the announcement that more than $16,000,000 had been raised for the United Jewish Appeal in the first five months of the year. Although no comparative figures with the same period of last year are offered, and although most communities hold the drives in the first part of the year, yet there are millions yet that will pour in, and unquestionably the $18,000,000 or so raised last year will be far exceeded when Jan. 1, 1945 rolls around.

The tremendous increase that must be behind these figures would seem to indicate not so much a greater munificence on the part of American Jewry, although that must be a significant factor too, as that the American Jewish community is slowly becoming more mature and more organized. It has been an axiom among those experienced in raising money in drives, that some communities give more than others because the communities are older and consequently have a history of giving for many years behind them. And the other point, that of more complete organization, is that many communities which have not heretofore been organized into once a year drives, have now been set up on the same basis as has been operating in the major cities.

But besides the analysis of the reason for the increased giving, there is this general overall deduction. The American Jewish Community seems at last to be recognizing its responsibilities in a somewhat adequate manner. And the point should not be overlooked of the excellent work of the J. D. C. over a period of years which finally is showing up in the millions of dollars being raised.

until he was called to the service. He is now stationed at a camp in Florida.

Until last week-end, it never occurred to me that anyone could object to what we are doing. We are spending our own good money, and in addition we are doing all our selling by mail, and even here, our solicitation is strictly on a merit basis, with no type of appeal whatsoever. What I am saying here is we are not resorting to the means which one paper which calls itself national used, such as saying it was fighting Hitler or fighting anti-Semitism, and other such bologna. All we're doing here is putting out a newspaper, and nothing more.

What I am leading up to here is that last week I was in a group where I was called a racketeer and unethical for putting out a national edition. I was urged to desist from my bound to be disastrous course, and I was called a detriment to the Anglo-Jewish press. This was not merely one man's isolated views, but the entire group, including one lawyer of high standing, criticised me severely. They said they had no objection to a bona fide national Anglo-Jewish paper, but they objected strenuously to what I was doing. When I said I was adding correspondents to our staff from throughout the country, I was called a "liar."

I still can't understand why The Post is harming anyone in this step, and all the threats in the world couldn't force me to stop. This is what I have dreamed of and as long as we follow an honest course, no one has a right to object.

The Fishermen's Co-operative Colonies that have been established in recent years along the sea-coast of Palestine are responsible for 27% of Palestine's total fishing catches, compared with 2% in 1939. The Jewish Agency Maritime Department disclosed that a Jewish National Shipping Company will be organized after the war. The establishment of fishing villages along the entire length of the seashore and the training of youth for seafaring are among the chief objectives of the post-war plan mapped by the Jewish Agency.

James Rosenberg's Paintings on Exhibition

A hard-headed, successful executive, James N. Rosenberg, prominent Jewish philanthropist, is probably more proud of his painting than of anything else he has accomplished in his successful career.

The two paintings illustrated here, Exodus, above and Consumed by Thine Anger, below, are part of Mr. Rosenberg's exhibition which will open today at the Ferargil Galleries in New York.

The exhibition will continue through July 12.

For thirty years Mr. Rosenberg, who is honorary chairman of the Executive Committee of the Joint Distribution Committee and a member of the Executive Committee of the American Jewish Committee, has had his works exhibited in New York, Philadelphia and Boston.

I THINK AS I PLEASE

By CARL ALPERT

A lot of bunk has been written about the sudden interest in religion taken by men in the armed forces, and the significance of the phrase, "there are no atheists in the foxholes," has been exaggerated considerably. Jewish boys, too, have shown no sudden interest in kashruth, Sabbath, prayers, than they did before their entrance into the armed forces.

Down here at Camp Blanding, Florida, some 1,500 men attended the Passover Seder, but it was obvious that most of them came for the gefilte fish and kneidlach.

The Protestant chaplain marveled at the attendance. Said he to the Jewish chaplain: "You must be very gratified at this outpouring of Jewish men. -I imagine, however, that the size of your congregation on this occasion is due to the occurrence of the holiday. At usual weekly service, I suppose, you don't get more than six or seven hundred!"

The weekly attendance, as you may guess, is far, far less than that yet it is true that the soldiers do come—and in numbers proportionately greater than their attendance at synagogue in civilian life. To be sure, the rabbi never served corned beef and tongue sandwiches at the synagogue back home.

One must not underestimate the drawing power of the sandwiches. Many is the time I have gone for them myself. I remember one eventful Friday night when I secretly pocketed three sandwiches. They came in mighty handy the next day when, far out in the Florida swamps, we were expected to eat the justly maligned Army C rations. I feasted on corned beef and tongue on pumpernickel.

Generally speaking, the soldiers carry over into the army the same interest which drew them back home, perhaps with more intensity.

The other day I sat in the Service Club library reading. From another room I heard the public piano and I recognized strains of a popular Palestinian melody, followed by a couple of well-known Yiddish selections. I bounded to my feet and dashed for the piano, noting that several others were similarly attracted from other corners of the Service Club. The player was a young Austrian refugee, less than six months in this country, most of which time he had already spent in the army. He was lonesome, blue, and was seeking consolation on the piano, which he played well. As a result of the chance notes he had struck, half a dozen of us found a community of interests.

Parents should not get the impression that their boys are going to come and faithfully don tefillin each morning as a result of newly awakened religious fervor. The chaplains are doing an excellent job, but they cannot achieve miracles.

Have you ever discussed this matter with your son in the service? Clip this column, send it to him, and ascertain his opinion. Let's hear what they write you.

ONLY RABBI IN ROME THANKS VATICAN IN SABBATH SERVICE

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

LONDON—The Vatican radio, describing the first Sabbath services held by Jews in Rome since their liberation by the Allied armies, said that Rabbi Zolli, the aged rabbi of Rome, expressed from the pulpit the thanks of the Jewish community for the aid extended to Jews in Italy by the Catholic Church and clergy during the months of German persecution.

Many American Jewish soldiers attended the services. An American Jewish chaplain, Lt. Morris N. Kurtzer, of Des Moines, Iowa, made a speech telling the worshippers how Jewish soldiers fell on the Italian front in the fight for the liberation of Italy from the Germans and the Fascists. He assured the Jews of Rome that the worst was over and that they could look forward to a free and democratic life. His speech, delivered in English, was summarized in Italian by a translator.

American jeeps were parked in front of the synagogue while the services were going on. They were besieged by happy Jewish children, whose fathers and mothers were inside praying. When the services concluded, the Jewish soldiers poured out of the synagogue and climbed into their jeeps to return to the front.

LaFollette Defends His FEPC Bill

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

WASHINGTON—Testifying before the House Labor Committee in support of his bill for a permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission, Rep. Charles M. LaFollette, said that the right to work is a property right which Congress has the authority to regulate. "Whether many of us realize it or not," he declared, "the Supreme Court recognition of the Wagner Labor Act has brought forth a new concept of property—the right to work at gainful employment."

LONDON—Ninety-three of the 1500 Jews interned on the island of Mauritius, off Madagascar in the Indian Ocean, have died, and the same number have left the island to join the British armed forces, it was disclosed in Commons this week by Colonial Minister Col. Oliver Stanley. The Mauritius internees are Jewish refugees who were apprehended when they attempted to enter Palestine without visas. Most of them have been on the island more than three years.

Stanley said that 224 men had volunteered for service in the armed forces, of whom 149 were accepted. Of these 93 have left the island to join military units, while an additional 56 await transportation. Sixty-four wom-

I wonder if you have noticed the large number of Jewish radio programs on national hook-ups. They aren't Jewish radio programs, but rather radio programs of Jewish content. I imagine that these programs are part of a plan to acquaint the national public with the plight of the Jews uprooted in this war (most of the programs are under the auspices of the J. D. C.) but this is a departure and does indicate a new policy. I am not a radio fan, and work all day Sunday the day that most of these programs are scheduled, so I can't report on my impression of their effectiveness, but since the principals in them are national celebrities of stage and screen, I suppose they really get across a message, and a much needed one.

The Jewish Ledger, of Hartford, Conn., celebrated its fifteenth anniversary last week in a unique and very fitting manner when in honor of its editor, Rabbi Abraham J. Feldman, one of the finest in the whole field, a collection of books of Jewish interest was presented to the University of Connecticut. The entire community was enabled in this way to take part in the newspaper's birthday, and a grand deed was accomplished for everyone concerned. I understand the books ran into the thousands of dollars. Rabbi Feldman, and the paper's owner, Sam Neusner founded the Ledger in 1929, and have remained at their respective posts right on through.

How many people noticed the announcement of the reorganization of the Commission which governs the anti-Defamation League? This has been a subject of controversy in B'nai B'rith governing circles for some years now, with the charge being that Mr. Sigmond Livingstone, chairman and founder, was ruling the body without too much concern for the wishes of the B'nai B'rith. Under the new agreement, reached at the recent Triennial Convention of the Order thirty-one people will comprise the commission, with Mr. Livingstone naming fifteen; Mr. Monsky seven, and each of the Districts naming one. It remains to be seen how the new arrangement will work out.

I'd Rather Be Right

By Samuel Grafton

Mr. Willkie is a round man. I don't mean a fat man. I mean a three-dimensional man, a man who casts a shadow.

He has just remarked quietly that the states' rights issue is a phony. And, of course, it is. Mr. W. says that we can't live by states' rights alone, and we can't live by strong federal government alone. He says we need both strong central government and the advantages of local administration.

This has taken by surprise a number of second-rate imitators of Calhoun in the Republican party, who have recently set up their peanut stands in the market place, and have been selling states' rights, pure and primitive, as if these ancient goods were some remarkable new commodity, like lucite.

THE MARK OF OUR PRESENCE

Mr. W. has then roved over into another field, and has remarked that he sees no conflict between social security and private enterprise. He thinks we can have both economic protection and economic adventure. Again, he has taken by surprise the makers of coarse jokes about "cradle to the grave" paternalism. He has risen head and shoulders above those shrews of politics who consider that if every baby in America is fed, nobody will ever be able to make $100 on the sale of a used car again.

* * *

Each generation in American life has to make its contribution to the American idea. No generation is entitled to a free ride, to take up the America that has been handed to it, to live in it and use it for awhile, and then pass it on, exactly as it found it, unchanged. One cannot even live in a house without impressing a certain character on it through the years; and a living people cannot spend decades in a great country without leaving upon it some marks of their presence.

TO SHOW WE LIVED HERE

America will not be like Russia, in any foreseeable future, because private enterprise is too strong an impulse in American life to pass from the scene; no great impulse ever passes away completely. But we shall not go back to the economic jungle, either, because social security also has become a great impulse in American life, and it has no more intention of dying than has private enterprise.

* * *

To marry these two, not to set them into hopeless battle against each other, is the destiny of our generation; there never was a generation in American life which had more clearly the duty of making a synthesis of older elements, of states' rights and of central government, of social security and of free business. This will be our contribution, this will be the mark of our having lived here.

A PART OF THE PROBLEM

The great quarrel we can have with Mr. Dewey and Mr. Bricker is that both men have taken a more primitive view. By setting themselves up as the particular champions of single elements in the grand design, of states' rights, of private enterprise, they have made themselves special pleaders, hagglers. Thus they run the danger of becoming mere encumbrances on the road to reconciliation, not the solution to our generation's problem, but, perhaps, a part of the problem.

They have set up their stands, and they sell pretty good neckties and socks, but nothing a man can cover himself with completely and be secure against all wind and weather.

Ruling Owner Must Return for Property Arouses Alarm; Palestine Opens Protest

Restoration Made But Jewish Owners Must Be There

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

JERUSALEM—The annulment of the anti-Jewish laws by the Allied Military Government in Rome and the return of property to Jews there was hailed in the Hebrew press in Palestine this week, but exception was taken to the reported AMG specification that their property will be restored to Jewish owners "if they return to their homes."

"It is unacceptable that expelled Jews who are unable to return to their homes should lose their looted property," the influential Hebrew newspaper Davar writes. "We assume that it is not the intention of the United Nations to dispossess orphans of their inheritance. This declaration may serve as a precedent for other countries wherein a greater number of Jews lived and a larger amount of property was pillaged. We cannot imagine that the United Nations will permit the heritage of murdered Jews to be taken over by local authorities.

"The Jewish victims," the paper continues, "have right to demand that the United Nations establish a principle applying to all countries, under which any Jew is to get back his property, or its equivalent, without being compelled to return, even temporarily, to the land where his brethren have been murdered. This principle should provide that property of murdered Jews be handed to their heirs, or be placed at the disposal of the Jewish nation for assistance to refugees."

Republicans Ready To Disgorge Anderson

Special

CHICAGO—Apparently too much for Chicago GOP leaders, Charles J. Anderson, anti-Semitic candidate for the congressional seat from a metropolitan Chicago district, is now in the process of losing his support of the regular machine. Write-ups in the Chicago Sun revealing Anderson's anti-war, anti-Semitic and anti-negro bias were borne out in a report to the Sixth Illinois district Republicans by Edward J. Clamage, chairman of the anti-subversive committee of the Illinois department of the American Legion.

The party very likely will put a rival candidate on the ticket.

G. M. C.'s Column

United States, in its current issue carries a poll of leaders of public opinion on "What can be done to do to keep racial, religious and minority issues out of the political campaign. A few of the answers make interesting reading. and I present them herewith:

J. M. Patterson, President, The News, New York:

"The question of how to keep racial and religious animus out of the coming political campaign is a difficult one. Some advocate doing it by laws, jail sentences, etc. It is possible that this method might do as much harm as good by advertising and irritating the situation.

"In the past we have had numerous political campaigns in which racial and religious problems of various kinds have entered, more or less openly. I am sure you can think of many in our history, both in local and national campaigns.

"In the past, what was known as our melting pot has served in many cases to solve a problem of this sort. I think, and I am sure I hope, that the melting pot will continue to do effective work for Americanism in the future."

John P. Lewis, Managing Editor, P.M., New York:

"You ask: What can be done to keep racial, religious and minority questions out of the political campaign?

"I ask in return: What can be done to keep greedy and selfish men from seeking to impose their green and selfishness and oppression on others?

"You answer my question, and you have the answer to your own."

Robert R. McCormick, Publisher, The Chicago Tribune:

"The best way to treat this so-called problem is to forget it. Every reference to it is like throwing a stone in the water. It makes more ripples."

"Left alone it would die and the people who live off it would have to go to work."

French Struggle With 3 Ways To Make Restitution

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

ALGIERS—The thorny problem of restoration of Jewish property either confiscated under the anti-Jewish laws, or transferred to non-Jews in advance of these measures in an attempt to evade confiscation, is now being studied here by the French Committee of National Liberation, which has been designated the "Provisional Government of France" by the French Consultative Assembly.

The problems facing the committee are typical of those that will arise in every German-held or German-dominated country as they are freed by the Allied armies. The decisions taken here may well set a precedent for all of liberated Europe.

One of the plans which is under consideration by the "Committee on Jewish Property" appointed by the Committee of Liberation would divide the former Jewish property into three categories: Property which was sold prior to extension of the anti-Jewish laws from France to Algiers, in anticipation of eventual confiscation; property which was sold after announcement that anti-Jewish laws would be introduced in Algiers, but before the property had been taken over by the authorities; and, finally, property which was seized by the Vichy Administration and sold privately or at public auctions.

Jewish owners whose property fell into the last classification were returned their property within a month after April 3, 1943, following abrogation of the Vichy anti-Jewish laws by Gen. Henri Giraud.

Labor, Religious Groups Meet on Rabbi's Call

Special

COLUMBUS, Ohio—Aimed to establish a closer relationship among religious, industrial and labor groups, a dinner meeting was held here for all Columbus ministers, industrialists and large employers of labor and heads of labor unions in the city and state. Two speakers, representing the church and synagogue, and two others, representing the viewpoints of labor, addressed the large audience. Afterwards an open period of discussion developed.

Responsible for having initiated the meeting was Rabbi Samuel M. Gup of the Bryden Road Temple, chairman of the committee on arrangements. The event marked a long stride forward in developing a better understanding between the groups attending.

Argentine Bans FDR Message

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

NEW YORK—President Roosevelt's report to Congress, this week, concerning the admission to this country of 1,000 refugees, during which he condemned persecution of Jews and other minorities by the Germans, was banned from the press by the Argentine Government, the New York Herald-Tribune reported in a dispatch from Montevideo.

The dispatch states that this is the first time that a formal announcement by a President of the United States has ever been suppressed by the Argentine government. It adds, however, that numerous statements to the press by President Roosevelt, and other high officials, including Secretary of State Hull and Under-Secretary Stettinius have been banned in recent weeks.

Dr. Julius Wurtzel, former Jewish member of the Polish senate, died in Haifa of a heart attack. Sixty-six years old, he was editor of the Polish-Jewish daily newspaper Chwila which appeared in Lwow, Poland, until the outbreak of the war.

Eddie Cantor's goal for the Fifth War Loan Drive will be the sale of $200,000,000 worth of bonds in a 24-hour broadcast. His last record was forty million for the Fourth War Loan. It seems that for years the Loews of Loew's Theaters, Inc., have been trying to educate the public to pronounce the name correctly. Ad campaigns, press campaigns—all to no avail. Even some of the company's employees continue to articulate it "Lowie." Slogans were invented—"See Loew's for good show" . . . "Loew is the high in entertainment" . . . "Loew and behold!" No results. Topper occurred after days of a strenuous drive during which all ads were captioned, "Lo! Lo! Lo!" A radio announcer blared, "See such and such picture at Lowie's State Theatre!" A Loew is me!

Word has seeped through that Leni Riefenstahl, Teacher Hitler's pet, has married. Her spouse is said to be a Prussian of unquestionable Aryan descent. Leni is the lady who waded through three feet of Hollywood ice entangled in thousands of feet of her 1938 Olympics' film (German version) . . . and who never got defrosted until she got safely back to Berlin where the climate is very hot. We wish the couple connubial blitz.

"Thirty-five," says Sam, keeping two fingers crossed and tongue in cheek. "Yeah," nods Bob, "You take good care of yourself. Don't smoke or drink . . . a lot . . . get plenty of rest, eh?" "And I used to play lots of golf. In fact, I played in the eighties." "That so?" ribs Hope. "Must have been wonderful playing in those days!"

We may be wrong, but we're willing to wager: That before long heated debate concerning partition of Eretz Israel will spring up in Zionist circles. . . . That a well-known Hollywood figure will be involved in a controversy with the Jewish press. . . . That if a certain organization succeeds in buying one of the Yiddish papers it will convert that publication into an English-Jewish daily. . . . That at the Zionist convention Dr. Israel Goldstein will be re-elected to the presidency of the ZOA. . . . That an internal issue will threaten to rip the Poale Zion organization asunder. . . . That if the whole story of recent anti-Jewish outrages in the Boston area were told publicly, American democracy would blush.

THIS AND THAT

We're all for William Gellermann's expose of Congressman Martin Dies. However, we are a little puzzled by the tendency, in certain quarters, to stress that the author is a Methodist. Could it be that if Gellermann's German name were taken for a "Jewish name"—which, we hasten to point out, it isn't—the effectiveness of his book might be diminished? . . . The Benjamin Warner after whom a Liberty Ship is being named is the late father of Hollywood's Warner Brothers.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS

Albert E. Kahn, co-author of "Sabotage," will make the headlines on July 5, especially in the Jewish press. . . . Don't miss Marie Syrkin's article on Jim Crowism in the schools in the current issue of Common Ground. It's a chapter from a forthcoming book by the daughter of the late Poale Zionist leader, Nahum Syrkin. . . . Have we told you that Etta Shiber's recent best-seller, "Paris Underground," is being readied for the screen? . . . There's No Place Like Washington" is the title of a forthcoming book by Vera Bloom, daughter of Congressman Sol Bloom. . . . Maurice Samuel's latest book, "Harvest in the Desert," has just been published, but has already sold twenty thousand copies. You'll like it. In it there's an anecdote so warmly human that we can't resist telling it to you. It seems that the late philosopher Ahad Ha'am, while strolling with the Hebrew poet Bialik was lamenting that Hebrew was not really alive in Palestine. . . . A little boy who happened to be passing by stopped to look at them and Ahad suddenly reached out and tweaked the youngster's ear. The boy let out a yell of pain, ran across the street, turned around and furiously squealed "Hamor zaken," which is good Hebrew for "old donkey." Whereupon the aged philosopher beamed and turned to Bialik and said: "Now's that what we need!"

Violin virtuoso Jascha Heifetz, who's doing his fiddling overseas nowadays, likes to spend his spare time with the GI's instead of hobnobbing with their officers. The Clifford (playwright) Odets menage is preparing to add a nursery. . . . Best wishes for a speedy recovery to former Representative Florence P. Kahn of California. . . . Barney Ross, former boxing champion and more recently marine hero, is hoping that John Garfield will play him in the projected film on his (Barney's) career.

MOSCOW—Many Jewish officers and men are among the American troops stationed at the United States air base "somewhere in Russia," it is reported this week by a Soviet correspondent who interviewed both the crews of the bombers and fighter planes based in the USSR and also the men who man the fields. The correspondent reveals that among the Americans are two cousins who had never met before they came to Russia, although they lived only a few miles from each other. One is Lieut. Seymour Auerbach of 1453 St. Marks Place in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn, and the other is Sgt. Walter Auerbach of North Bergen, New Jersey.

Returning Jews Welcome, Minister Says

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

WASHINGTON—Prime Minister Stanislaw Mikolajczyk of the Polish Government-in-Exile this week estimated that "between 800,000 and 900,000 Jews are still in Poland where they are being kept alive through aid being given to them by friendly Poles."

He said that the Polish Government might have to assume trusteeship for some confiscated property of Poles and Jews alike, before returning it to its rightful owners, and he gave assurances that Jews returning to Poland after the war would be welcome.

The Polish Prime Minister revealed these facts at a press conference here at which he emphasized that post-war Poland would be a "really democratic country" and that "every citizen, every religion, every race" would have full civil rights. He estimated Jews constituted one-half of the five million Polish citizens killed by the Nazis.

The war, the common suffering it entailed, said the Premier, had brought Poles and Jews closer together, and as a result anti-Semitism in the post-war period would be considerably diminished. He stressed that Poles were daily risking their lives to feed and care for Jews hiding from the Nazis in the forests and cellars of Poland, and stated that some of the Jewish fugitives had not seen the light of day for two years. "Polish priests," he reported, "were shot by the Nazis for giving aid to the Jews."

Delegations see Minister

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

NEW YORK—Two Jewish delegations, one speaking in behalf of the Representation of Polish Jewry and the other in behalf of the American Representation of the General Jewish Workers' Union of Poland, were received by Polish Prime Minister Mikolajczyk in Washington and discussed with him a number of problems concerning the Jews of Poland, it was announced here.

Between You and Me

By BORIS SMOLAR
Editor-in-Chief, Jewish Telegraphic Agency

RESCUE TRENDS

I is in the system of physical extermination. . . . The German Army which occupied Warsaw in 1915 did not introduce ghettos and "extermination camps" for Jews as the Nazi Army of today. . . . It went after Jewish merchandise, however, and confiscated Jewish property as does the Gestapo. . . . Extremely interesting as a literary creation, Mr. Schneour's novel also gives the reader a picture of what the Germans are when they are defeated. . . . The same officers who took great pleasure in making fun of respectable Jews and in ruining them economically became as meek as lambs when they were forced to retreat from Warsaw. . . . They didn't even defend "their honor" when slapped publicly on the street by the very same people whom they had oppressed. . . . That this, and even worse, will be the end of the Germans in Poland in this war is not to be doubted.

Summer Notes.

The summer season will find Jewish organizations in America more active than ever before. . . . This will be due to the fact that the Allied invasion opens new possibilities for various activities in connection with Jewish post-war demands. . . . We hear that the World Jewish Congress is considering the question of launching a campaign for relief funds in this country. . . . New plans, hingeing on the prospect of a speedy Allied victory over the Nazis, are also under discussion at the American Jewish Conference. . . . The American Zionist Emergency Committee intends to remain active during the summer as result of new and favorable developments in London which may find an echo in Washington. . . . Other central Jewish bodies have similarly mapped out summer programs of intensive activity in connection with preparations for a possible sudden breakdown of the Nazis. . . . We all remember the high praise given by Vice-President Wallace to Dr. Chaim Weizmann's suggestions concerning synthetic rubber. . . . But it seems that Dr. Weizmann's suggestions were not utilized in the United States. . . . British industrial enterprises working for the war effort, however, have now placed large orders for synthetic rubber produced under Dr. Weizmann's formula. . . . Now that Rome has been liberated by the Allies, it can be disclosed that the United States Government was aware of the fact that Arabs in Palestine have been receiving funds from Italian banks for their anti-Jewish and anti-British activities. . . . In fact, Dr. Walter Lowdermilk, assistant chief of the Soil Conservation Service of the United States, brought the news from Palestine to Washington some time ago. . . . He reported that during his visit to Palestine a British officer informed him that checks from Italian banks were found on the bodies of Arab terrorists killed in the disturbances of 1939. . . .

NAZIS AND GERMANS

Anyone who draws a distinction between the Nazis of this war and the German armies of World War I should read Zalman Schneour's "Downfall" just published by Roy Publishers. . . . Mr. Schneour, one of the most prominent Jewish poets and novelists, gives a vivid picture of what took place in Warsaw when the German Army entered that city in World War I. . . . His novel, masterfully written shows how German soldiers and officers looted Jewish property, how they degraded Jewish families, how they ruined Jewish existence. . . . Reading the "Downfall" one sees little difference between the brutality of the German occupation forces in Poland in the last war and in the present war. . . . The only difference between the Nazis of today and the German officers and soldiers of World War

Recipes for Kosher Tables

It's time we got around to such an important item as the traditional Shabbas dish of Gefilte Fish.

Gefilte Fish, Boiled

3 pounds fish, whole

2 onions

1 slice bread

salt and pepper

1 egg, beaten

1 cup cold water

1 tablespoon butter

1 stalk celery, cut up

2 sprigs parsley, cut up

Bone the fish, being careful not to break the skin, and leaving the head and tail intact. Put the flesh of the fish through the grinder with one of the onions. Soak the bread in cold water, squeeze it dry, and mix with ground fish and onion; add salt, pepper, egg and cold water, and mix thoroughly until smooth. Fill skin of the fish with this mixture, making it look natural. Sprinkle outside of fish with salt and pepper, place in pot with fish bones, cut the remaining onion into quarters and add, add butter, celery and parsley, and hot water to cover. Let simmer about an hour and a quarter until done. If desired, strain fish liquid and make sauce. To avoid burning and make removal easier, it is preferable to lay fish on a plate and place the whole in pot to cook.

Stuffed cabbage leaves are a well known item, but have you ever stuffed a whole cabbage?

Stuffed Cabbage

1 large cabbage

2 tablespoons fat

1 onion, chopped fine

1 cup bread crumbs or cooked rice

1 pound ground meat

1 teaspoon salt

½ teaspoon pepper

2 eggs, slightly beaten

1 cup hot water

Remove wilted outside leaves from cabbage, and cut out inside of cabbage, leaving a shell half an inch thick. Chop inside of cabbage fine, discarding hard core in centre if desired. Heat fat in frying pan, add chopped onion, and let brown slightly. Soak bread crumbs, squeeze dry, and add; or add cooked rice. Add chopped cabbage and ground meat. Let cook until meat is browned, mixing ingredients in pan lightly with a fork while meat is browning. Remove from fire. Add salt and pepper, and beaten eggs. Mix with a fork lightly but thoroughly. Fill shell of cabbage with mixture, place in a pot, add water, cover pot, and let simmer over fire or bake in oven at 350 degrees for an hour and a half. If desired, uncover pot and brown in oven during last 15 minutes of cooking.

If you feel like pickling your own meat here's the recipe for corned beef or tongue:

1 five-pound beef tongue or
5 pounds brisket

1 cup salt

3 pints water

¼ teaspoon saltpetre

2 tablespoons lukewarm water

2 tablespoons sugar

2 cloves garlic, sliced
½ teaspoon paprika
1 to 4 tablespoons mixed spices

Mix salt and water, and stir until salt is dissolved. Dissolve the saltpetre in the lukewarm water and add. Add remaining ingredients and mix thoroughly. Place meat in a stone jar, pour in the liquid to cover the meat. Place a plate over the meat, and a heavy weight over the plate. Let stand in a cold place for 21 days. Turn the meat 4 times during this period.

* * *

Or, if you prefer fresh tongue you might try this one:

Stewed Fresh Tongue

1 fresh beef tongue

water to cover

1 tablespoon salt

1 onion, sliced

6 whole cloves

6 peppercorns

2 bay leaves

Place tongue in pot with hot or cold water to cover, add remaining ingredients, cover pot and let simmer three to four hours until tender. Remove from fire, let tongue stand in liquid until cool enough to handle. Remove tongue, peel off outer skin and trim off root, and return to liquid. If desired to serve hot, reheat. If desired to serve cold, let tongue stand in liquid until lukewarm, then chill in refrigerator. If removed from liquid or allowed to cool in liquid at room temperature, tongue will shrink considerably. Keep adding hot water during cooking so that tongue is always covered. Slice, and serve. Cloves, peppercorns and bay leaves may be omitted, if desired.

* * *

To serve with that cold plate or sandwich lunch (and, incidentally, to furnish lots of nourishment), how about a dish of split pea soup?

This one is parve:

Split Pea Soup

2 cups split peas

3 pints cold water

1 potato, diced

3 sprigs parsley, diced

1 large celery root, diced

1 small onion, diced

1 small carrot, diced

1 small clove garlic

Pick peas over and wash, and soak in some of the water several hours or over night. Place in pot with rest of the water, heat to boiling point, add vegetables and garlic, and let simmer several hours until tender, stirring often to prevent burning. Remove garlic, pass soup with vegetables through a strainer, and re-heat. If thinner soup is desired, dilute with boiling water; if thicker soup is desired, add paste made of 1 tablespoon flour blended with ¼ cup cold water, and let soup simmer 10 minutes longer, stirring constantly. Serve with croutons.

AL SEGAL

Speaks On

Quiet Rabbi

YOUR Mr. Segal observes the Central Conference of American Rabbis (Reform) having their convention in his home town this week and can't resist putting in a few words of his own.

Mind you, he is not one of those laymen who, because they pay dues regularly, consider it their function to regulate the minds and lives of rabbis; to tell them what to say and what not to say in sermons; to be critics of what their wives wear. ("The idea of a rabbi's wife wearing a hat like that! It must have cost her $25 if it cost her a cent!"); to find fault if the rabbi doesn't mix enough with the general community and to find fault if he does (He's a rabbi to the goyim!).

No! Mr. Segal lets rabbis alone. He knows how difficult a rabbi's life is, like the life of a goldfish which has no privacy at all. Mr. Segal thanks his stars for not being a rabbi. (Once he was on the way to being one.) As a layman he is allowed to enjoy his private faults—a pleasure not to be had by a rabbi.

So he is not going to make any contribution of his own to the difficulties already besetting rabbis; particularly not when they are relaxing in our town, far away from their congregations, thank goodness.

Yet Mr. Segal doesn't think it would be out of line for him to think out loud as he looks back and considers that he might have been a rabbi, and what sort he would have been! This is to say, what would his preaching have been? Would he have been another one of those rabbinical statesmen who devote so much of their time addressing the White House and 10 Downing Street?

Would he have been a hot debater in Israel, a furnace-tender, you might say, who is always on the alert to make sure that the flames of Israel's controversies never die down?

Mr. Segal makes himself over into the role of Rabbi Segal. This is not hard to do. He needs but take his pipe in hand (he's been smoking a corn cob lately) and load and light it, take into himself a couple of inhalations—and here he is—Rabbi Segal.

I can't say that Rabbi Segal is a big man in the loud places of Israel. He is never around where the tumult is. He is always absent from the convocations which in Israel become debating contests. Neither the President of the United States nor the Prime Minister of England ever has heard of him. He never signs manifestos nor issues ultimatums.

He had never thought of himself as a statesman or an authority on foreign affairs. He isn't global. His world is the town in which he serves and he is humble enough to know that he's too small a man to spread himself out all over the earth.

It doesn't stir any restlessness in him to see other rabbis taking in the whole world to the farthermost boundaries and shouting speeches across oceans. He knows there is so much to do at home; the chancellories of the nations can keep on blundering without any help from him.

You see, Rabbi Segal has an old and yet rather rare idea of what being a rabbi is. Too, he has a peculiar notion of what Judaism is. Judaism, as he understands it, is a way by which a man may attain a good life, and being a rabbi, has to do with teaching what the good life is.

In his quiet place Rabbi Segal has felt disturbed to see rabbis and their flocks going far from this concept. Judaism seems to have become politics; an irredentist movement yearning for lost territory, a struggle for boundaries, a fierce contest of parliamentarians, a battleground of parties, a foreign policy association.

Rabbi Segal, far from all this, has been quietly preaching that the main end of being a Jew is to live in honor, to deal justly, to be compassionate and to walk humbly with God. He tells his people that the fulfillment of a Jew is in living the ethical teachings of Torah and prophets. He knows that this is no longer fashionable preaching among the global sophisticates.

Yes, the simple Judaism of the good life has been quite forgotten in the long period in which rabbis and their flocks have been wandering far from the home grounds. Ever since the last war they have been chasing after new ideologies of being Jewish. Since Hitler's time they have been driven farther from the old base by the impact of dreadful events. Rabbi Segal remains at the old stand of ethical Judaism, and what if others become politicians in Israel?

He knows, though, that the good life is not just self-righteousness in which he may wrap himself up away from the world. The good life is not to be lived in a vacuum. There can be no good life for any man if his neighbors suffer evil, if injustice robs them of their just due of a good life of their own if their children miss their birthright.

The good life of a man cannot be lived separately but is bound up with the lives of his neighbors. He suffers with them. Rabbi Segal preaches that the Jew is not a man apart and that his destiny is not separate from that of all mankind. The Jew may not stand alone crying his own pain. The agony of the Jew is not something apart from the pain of humanity; it is all one pain.

Rabbi Segal's preaching is that the Jew must go along with all mankind to seek the difficult way up the mountain to salvation. He has bright lights of his own to help show the way. He has his teaching of justice, compassion and loving-kindness.

No, the Jew's salvation is not in a remote Jerusalem. The Jerusalem which must be achieved is the heart of man. Jerusalem is man's fulfillment as an ethical being who is just and compassionate. Let's go ahead and win it, each man in his own heart. Jew and Christian. Why go searching for a distant spot on the earth called Jerusalem?

So teaching, Rabbi Segal waits patiently in his quiet place. He feels other rabbis will be coming home in time for their far-off wanderings.

(Mr. Segal's pipe has gone out and, lo, he's just a columnist again.)

NEW YORK—The proffered gift of a large, fully equipped building in Brooklyn to be used for national headquarters of the Jewish War Veterans was under consideration at the recent meeting of the executive committee. At the same session a committee was appointed to consider the advisability of rais-
